a through which people were defrauded and fleeced. That time has gone has become a national sport. The gambling features are only incidents. They have been ignored by racing associations which have striven steadily to elevate the character of the sport. First and foremost has been the Jockey Club, elways exercising a steadying hand, guiding the racing ship through shoals and surfs with unerring foresight, until now it is in deep water and sailing smoothly.

For several years the attendances around New York have steadily increased.

Stroke Made by Strong Hand.

"It is evident that this stroke was made by a strong hand and that its owner was going to do his work thoroughly. The slit-like opening under the chin shows that the stabber pushed his kindle more than once, as though to make sure that it was driven home. Then, and only then, did he cut, drawing the blade crosswise in the neck.

"The man would then be at a disadvantage, but would struggle and prevent a fatal injury until a number of futile attempts had been made. I do not think there was any intention to torture. Besides, no man living can say whether or not the main wound was made before the others, though it does not seem likely. I believe such a wound would will be so anxious to use the state of the main wound would the places of the state of the main wound would the places of the state of the main wound would would cause instant death.
